

Humanities

Alexander T. Bikbov

Graduated from Lomonosov Moscow State University in 1996, Faculty of Sociology. Candidate of Sciences degree, 2004. Associate member of Centre Maurice Halbwachs, Paris. Deputy Director of the MSU Centre of Modern Philosophy and Social Science. Member of the editorial board, Logos journal.

CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION. A METHOD FOR THE HISTORICAL SOCIOLOGY OF CONCEPTS

The concept and its meaning

Working with materials: division and applications

SECTION ONE. GENEALOGY OF THE NEW ORDER

I. THE STRUCTURE OF THE PROJECT: THE 'MIDDLE CLASS' FOR 'DEMOCRACY'

The Russian 19th century: geographic boundary as conceptual limitation

The political prehistory of the 'middle class': ownership and moderation

The internationalization of the 'middle class': from stability to financial solvency

II. THE RUSSIAN 'MIDDLE CLASS': THE ENERGY OF EXPLOSION AND

DISPERSION

On the periphery of a new conceptual network (early 1990s)

Middle-bourgeois: political change and the Soviet stigma (1950s-1960s)

The third productive force of a 'classless society' (1970s-1980s)

A normalization of the 'middle class' (1990s-2000s)

The 'middle class' in the media and the outdoor space (2011-2012)

CONCLUSION: THE 'THIRD ELEMENT' AND ATTENTION TO DIFFERENCES

SECTION TWO. THE HISTORICAL SOCIOLOGY OF SOVIET CONCEPTS

III. THE FUNCTION OF 'HUMANISM' IN OFFICIAL SOVIET RHETORIC

'Socialist humanism': the functional constant and its context

Conceptual and power shifts: an analysis model

From theories of totalitarianism to an analysis of rhetorical schemes and a balance of power

IV. BOURGEOIS 'PERSONALITY' IN A GOVERNMENT OF 'MATURE SOCIALISM'

Concepts in symbolic and social order

'Personality' as a function of 'consumption'

Official classifications: from the 'masses' to a 'personality'

New social disciplines: between the 'collective' and the 'personality'

Philosophical implications: autonomous 'personality'

Freeing the 'personality' as a political compromise

V. BIRTH OF A STATE OF 'SCIENTIFIC AND TECHNOLOGICAL PROGRESS'

The scientific management of society

The birth of the government agency from tasks to improve technology

The 'academization' of State Technology and cycles of reform

A civilized shift: from 'science at the service of practice' to 'scientific and technological progress'

VI. 'SCIENCE' WITHOUT 'PROGRESS': THE POST-SOVIET SOCIOLOGY OF CONCEPTS

From 'progress' to 'potential,' or on the way towards an international market

1991: 'destruction' or 'creation'?

The evolution of 'non-departmental expertise': the technical as political

The revolution of technical classifications: ownership and statistics

Conceptual inflation: strong 'science', weak 'scientists'

CONCLUSION: FROM THE HISTORY OF CONCEPTS TO AN UNDERSTANDING OF HISTORY

SECTION THREE. A (SELF) CRITICAL OBJECTIVATION OF SOCIOLOGICAL CONCEPTS

VII. RUSSIAN SOCIOLOGY: THE GENESIS OF DISCIPLINE AND THE SUCCESSION OF FOUNDATIONS

Institutions, universals, and common sense: a methodological introduction

Principles of thought and the genesis of sociological institutions

Common political coordinates and turning points

Method rules and the 'social problem'

Exemplary classifications and careers

Immobilis in mobile

VIII. NON-COLLEGIAL DISCIPLINE: A SKETCH OF THE POLITICAL MICROHISTORY OF RUSSIAN SOCIOLOGY

A chronology and geography of analysis

Sociology as the political choice of the Belle Époque: republicans versus antimonarchists

A fundamental criterion: collegial self-rule versus the overhead control over discipline

A genius of location: the birth of Soviet sociology from the spirit of leadership

The double career and conceptual compromises

Disciplining sociology anew: the institutional boundaries of renewing concepts

INSTEAD OF AN AFTERWORD: SUMMING UP ACADEMIC DEREGULATION

Is language the first instance of racism?

The institutionalized racism of academia: the deregulation hypothesis

The deregulation of exchanges, a concentration of power: the 'naturalness' of racism

The imperative of self-regulation: the expulsion of racists from academia